How heartbeat monitors are changing the way chess is watched and played

The use of beats per minute (BPM), or the heartbeat monitor, has emerged as a

HS Prannoy fought valiantly, but India succumbed to a 0-3 defeat against a second-string Japan in the quarter-finals of the Badminton Asia Mixed Team Championships, ending their campaign on a disappointing note here on Friday. India, the 2023 bronze medalists in Dubai, struggled to find their rhythm, and trailed 0-1 after going down in the mixed doubles. Dhruv Kapila and Tanisha Crosto, ranked 37th in the world, showed resilience before going down 13-21, 21-17, 13-21 to world number 12 Hiroki Midorikawa and Natsu Saito. With PV Sindhu sidelined due to a hamstring injury, India faced an uphill task against Tomoka Miyazaki, who has quickly risen to world number 8 following her triumph at the 2022 World Junior Championships. World number 31 Malvika Bansod, stepping in for Sindhu, put up a brave fight, especially in the second game, but struggled to match the control and consistency of her younger opponent and lost were the inaugural edition champions in 2017 and were runners-up in 2019. Miyazaki, vs Malviva, looking Japanese team, was sharp and precise, quickly surging to an 11-3 lead after Malviva hit long. Despite some good net play from the left-handed Indian, Miyazaki's cross-court drops and winners kept Malviva on the back foot. Malviva narrowed the gap to 12-19, capitalising on unforced errors from Miyazaki. However, two mistakes from the Indian allowed the Japanese to take the first game. The second game was more competitive as Malvika took a 5-3 lead, engaging in tight rallies. She managed a slim 11-10 advantage after Miyazaki went long. Malvika stayed sharp, not allowing her opponent to play her usual drops freely, moving to 17-15. But Miyazaki fought back, taking the lead at 18-17 after Malvika went wide. Miyazaki earned two game points, and despite Malvika saving one, a miscue handed the game to the Japanese, leaving India 0-2 down in the tie. Prannoy vs Nishimoto In the men's singles, Prannoy fell behind 4-7 as Nishimoto dominated with angled returns. The Indian clawed back to 8-8 after Nishimoto made a few errors, but two unforced mistakes gave the Japanese a three-point cushion at the break. Prannoy kept up the pressure, reducing the gap to 12-13 with a couple of jump smashes. However, there was little net play, and Nishimoto surged ahead 17-12, winning four straight points. Prannoy handed Nishimoto six game points with a net error, and another mistake sealed the first game for Japan. The second game was intense, with Prannoy and Nishimoto tied at 6-6. Two powerful cross-court smashes from Prannoy leveled the score at 7-7, followed by a huge roar and a fist pump. However, a subsequent smash led to a warning from the umpire, asking Prannoy not to celebrate in such a manner. Prannoy moved to 10-9 after a brilliant net block, and took a one-point lead into the break. A cross-court return left Prannoy flat on the floor, and Nishimoto moved to 14-12. However, the Indian erased the deficit to lead 16-15 after winning a lengthy rally. He then earned five game points after Nishimoto sent a shot wide, converting the first to roar back into the contest. In the decider, Nishimoto controlled the pace to take a 6-0 early lead. At 2-8, a shot was called out by the umpire, much to Prannoy's frustration as the Japanese grabbed a huge 11-3 lead at the interval. The Indian fought back, drawing out errors from Nishimoto to move to 12-15 but unforced errors.

The use of beats per minute (BPM), or the heartbeat monitor, has emerged as a winning formula for chess as it encourages audience's involvement in matches by helping them connect with the game more deeply, feel like former players. It may or may not be a clear reflection of the form or the eventual result but the heartbeat monitor, in use at Freestyle Chess Grand Slam, could be an added bonus for spectators to understand chess better, believes Grandmaster Vaibhav Suri. The technology is used to track players' heart rate during tournaments and broadcasts. Suri, an excellent player in his heyday and one of the coaches who guided the Indian team to a historic gold medal triumph in the Chess Olympiad, was all praise for the BPM. "The main thing is that Classical Chess could be a little monotonous for the followers after a few moves due to long opening variations that are in vogue today.

"This introduction that has now been in place for sometime could well give that additional flavour for the chess players as they will be able to guess the pressure that a certain player is feeling during the course of a game," Suri said. The BPM has been used in chess events before, but during the ongoing first tournament of the Freestyle Grand Slam tour, it is attracting a lot of attention due to players making tough decisions as well as blunders. "I am not saying it will have a sure-fire bearing on the outcome of the game as we have seen a lot of mistakes happening in the Freestyle Chess in tense moments for both players, but it surely adds an X factor, which, in my opinion, is good for the game," Suri said. Former world junior champion and Grandmaster Abhijeet Gupta had a different take: "This can be really helpful, many chess players work hard but not everyone attains excellence, and this could be one of the points to work on especially in key situations," he said. Abhijeet also pointed out that he had himself played under the watch of a monitor and was told he had a high pulse rate. "I was in shock for a short while." It is interesting to note that world champion D Gukesh is one of the calmest players in the world and it was evident during his handling of pressure situations in the World Championship match against Ding Liren of China last December. However, at Freestyle, the Indian ace has not been able to win any game despite maintaining a similar composure. Surí's observation about the final outcome weighs strongly here.

The BPM has also been a boon for chess commentators of varied strengths and observations to find and explain some deeper aspects of the game to the live audience on the social media and other platforms.
